

Supply Chain Standards

In addition to complying with other programme policies, Amazon expects all products that are listed and sold in the Amazon Store or provided to Amazon to be manufactured or produced in accordance with Amazon's supply chain standards. Our standards include the Amazon Supplier Code of Conduct, which requires that products be manufactured in safe, healthy, and inclusive work environments.

If Amazon becomes aware that We will not allow products listed on the Amazon.in may be manufactured in store that are made:

- Using forced, indentured or child labour, including products:
 - Identified as such by U.S. Customs and Border Protection or any other relevant authority
 - Made with cotton sourced from Turkmenistan or Uzbekistan (for more information, see the Responsible Sourcing Network cotton pledge)
- In hazardous or unsafe or exploitative working conditions, including in those factories deemed ineligible under the Bangladesh Accord
- In a facility where workers were subject to discrimination or abuse (physical, verbal or psychological)

Amazon evaluates credible allegations or reports of the above.

If Amazon has reason to suspect certain products do not meet our supply chain standards, we may contact you for request the following information from you:

- Demonstration of policies that align with Amazon's Supply Chain Standards
- Examples of your social auditing protocols, processes for assessing facility working conditions, or participation in an approved industry association that requires factory monitoring
- Knowledge of, and ability to provide, factory information for where your products are produced or manufactured
- Confirmation that products listed and sold on Amazon marketplace are not sourced from factories where there are demonstrated failures to meet question, potentially including unsupervised worker interviews

4. If you supply a product in violation of the expectations outlined in law or any of Amazon's Supply Chain Standards. This includes policies, including those produced in violation of Amazon's supply chain standards, we will take corrective actions, as appropriate. These include, but is not limited to:

- Products manufactured in whole or in part by factories deemed ineligible under the Bangladesh Accord or Bangladesh Alliance.
- Products containing cotton sourced from Turkmenistan or Uzbekistan. For more information, please see the Responsible Sourcing Network cotton pledge.
- Products made in whole or in part in facilities using forced or indentured labor. For more information please see Customs and Border Protection Withhold Release Order and Findings.

, returning inventory at your expense, immediately suspending or terminating selling privileges, or terminating the business relationship.