

Instructions for Bemix Pets cat collars

ALLERGIES: Monitor your cat in the first days - a small percentage of cats can have allergies to nylon or other materials. If you see any reaction (like loss of hair) remove the collars and get back to us for a refund. Talk to your vet on what you can do.

IMPORTANT #1: You need to monitor the cat for a few days after you put the collar and see if it's comfortable and if the cat feels good with it.

IMPORTANT #2: If you need to make it breakaway easier do the “push and pull” of the collar several times till you get the result wanted.

IMPORTANT #3: If you have a kitten, you will need to check her collar's fit more frequently, since she will be growing quickly.

HOW TO PUT THE COLLAR:

Step 1: Select a time to put the collar on.

The collar will be a new experience and sensation for your cat, so it will be important to choose a time of day when she will be a little less resistant to having the collar put on. You could try putting it on during her meal time or play time, when she will be distracted with another activity. You could also choose a time when she is calm, such as when you are spending quiet time with her.

Step 2: Let your cat investigate the collar.

Place the collar on the ground near your cat so that she can get used to it before you put it around her neck. To help her get more comfortable with the collar, you can put her own scent on it. To do this, you can rub the collar on your cat's bedding. You can also rub a soft cloth around your cat's mouth (if she will let you) and then rub this cloth on the collar. The collar may not seem so foreign and strange to her if she recognizes her own scent on it.

Step 3: Put the collar on your cat.

When your cat is calm and content, slowly and gently place the collar around her neck. Talk to her in a soothing and reassuring voice while you are putting the collar on to make the experience as comfortable as possible for her. Give her a treat when you have the collar on so that she can begin to make a positive association with wearing it.

- Your cat will probably fidget with, or scratch at, the collar and try to get it off the first time that you put it on.
- The first time that you put the collar on, leave it on for a few minutes then take it off.
- Put the collar on your cat each day, leaving it on for longer and longer each time. Your cat may need some time before she's more comfortable with wearing the collar all day.
- Consider giving her a treat each time that she has the collar on and doesn't try to get it off. Eventually, she will get used to the collar being on without needing a reward.
- If she manages to get the collar off on her own, put it back on but do not give her a treat—she may think that she is being rewarded for getting the collar off.

Step 4: Check the fit of the collar.

It is very important to make sure that your cat's collar does not fit too tightly or loosely around her neck. You will know that the collar fits correctly if you can snugly yet comfortably slide two to three fingers between the collar and your cat's neck. Your cat may tense her neck when she has the collar on for the first time, so you may need to wait a few minutes until she relaxes her neck muscles before testing the fit.

- Do not pull or tug on the collar when you are sliding fingers under it.
- If the collar does not fit correctly the first time, remove it from your cat and adjust it accordingly.

Step 5: Check your cat's collar on a regular basis.

Your cat may lose or gain weight as she gets older. If significant enough, her weight changes could cause her collar to become too loose or too tight. If you notice that her collar is hanging loosely around her neck or seems to be squeezing her neck, take it off and make the necessary readjustment.
