

I don't know how much of the Frizz Ease® hair serum to use. What's the best way to start?

Generally, a little goes a long way. Start with a small amount, one pump, and slowly increase the amount until you see the results you want. Since it depends on the length and thickness of your hair, the perfect amount is something you will discover for yourself. Your hair should never feel greasy or oily once it is dry. If it does, you've used too much. Always remember it is absolutely essential that the Frizz Ease Original 6 Effects Serum and Frizz Ease Extra Strength 6 Effects Serum frizzy-hair serums should be applied to soaking-wet hair. Do not towel dry before application.

Can I apply the Frizz Ease® hair serum to dried hair?

For the best results, Frizz Ease Original 6 Effects Serum and Frizz Ease Extra Strength 6 Effects Serum need to be applied to soaking-wet hair. You will not be able to spread it through dry hair. The excess water allows these frizzy-hair serums to better spread throughout the hair so each strand is covered evenly. In addition, rough towel drying can further roughen the hair cuticles and create more frizz. If you need to remove excess water to prevent dripping, gently blot the ends of your hair with a towel before applying these serums.

How do I diagnose my frizz level, and which hair serum should I use?

If you have flyaways and unruly strands of hair and moderate frizz, use the Frizz Ease Original 6 Effects Serum. If you constantly suffer from separated curls or stray hairs sticking out all over, and have coarse, thick, wiry hair, use the Frizz Ease Extra Strength 6 Effects Serum to control your chronic frizz. You can control flyaways and boost shine with Frizz Ease Expert Finish Polishing Serum.
